

DESCRIPTIVE ABSTRACT

Ultrasonic waves passing through guides (5, 6) are emitted towards a target (2) immersed in a liquid in order to infer the wetting of this target from certain features of the received signal. The invention is 5 notably applied to the study of liquid heavy metals.